

Mireille Klein

Is General Heritage Conservator at the French Ministry of Culture and Communication and Head of the Restoration Department at the National Center for Museum Research and Restoration (C2RMF), a key institution for documentation, conservation, and restoration of objects housed in the collections of over 1,200 museums. She played a pivotal role in the cooperation agreement between the Centro Conservazione e Restauro “La Venaria Reale” (CCR) and C2RMF for laser conservation activities and preventive conservation. As the head of preventive conservation at the Versailles branch of C2RMF, she oversaw the modernization of restoration laboratories at the Palace of Versailles, following CCR protocols.